RETURN OF PEACE CELEBRATED IN THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.

SECRETARY LONG SALUTED BY NIME WARSHIPS-HE IS WELCOMED TO THE TEXAS BY COM-MODORE PHILIP AND CAPTAIN SIGSDER

Philadelphia, Oct. 25 .- The great Peace Jubitee of this city began to-day with the stirring naval pageant, a spectacle which in magnitude and historic interest surpassed any like event ever given in Philadelphia. The day was devoted exclusively to the sea, and to-morrow will be devoted to the shore. The fighting machines of the Navy, lined up in midstream reast of the city, were reviewed by countiess usands from a fleet of reviewing craft led the flagship of the Secretary of the Navy. The great guns of the warships were heard tving homage to the chief, while the people returned their salutes to the heroes of the

The review was a brilliant beginning of the three days' demonstration. All kinds of craft were called into service to swell the fleet of reviewing vessels. It was an inspiring speciacle, and the booming of the guns as each warship gave its salute to the Secretary of the Navy added to the impressiveness of the occasion The great crowds on the beats in the line of hey glided slowly by in single file.

The yacht May, with Secretary Long and the Washington party aboard, led the parade, the ships of the Navy being anchored in single file in midstream, the line extending from Christian vate secretary. They reached the Broad-st. station at 12:55 o'clock. They were joined there by Captain Robley D. Evans and Congressman Hillborn, of California, and the Peace Jubilee committees, to escort them to the May icht. The little gun in the stern of the May fired a salute, and the Secretary's colors broke from the maintop. The May then headed down stream to take her place at the head of the procession. On the run down the river luncheon was served aboard the yacht to a party, including, besides those already named, Captain Kasagi; Governor Hastings, Mayor Warwick. Congressmen McAleer, Harmer, Bingham, Ad-Young, Wanger, Butler and Loudenslager; United States Senator Penrose, Major-General Snowden and the Jubilee Committee.

Toasts were drunk to the President of the United States, the Emperor of Japan, the captain of the Kasagi, Secretary Long, Captain Evans, Governor Hastings and Mayor Warwick, but there was no speech-making.

Arrived off League Island, the southern extremity of the city, the May found the line of reviewing vessels in waiting. She promptly swung in front, and at 3 o'clock the parade began to move along the Jersey side of the anchored warships, which lay about a thousand yards distant from each other, in this order: the Columbia, the Mayflower, the New-Orleans, the Texas, the Marblehead, the Dolphin, the Topeka, the Gloucester and the Winslow. The Kasagi lay at the northern end of the line, off Cramps' 'shipyard.

Behind the May were vessels of every description, yachts, excursion steamers, tugs, barges, launches, and even rowboats, all decked in the National colors, and sounding their whistles. Secretary Long, with Lieutenant Southerland and Captain Evans on either side, stationed himself on the bridge of the May, and soon the Co mbia, the first of the warships, was reached. Her officers and men were drawn up on the forward and after decks, every hand raised in salute, and then her 6-pounders began to sound the Secretary's salute of seventeen guns.

When the Texas was again reached the May was stopped, and at the invitation of Com-modore Philip and Captain Sigshee the party went over in launches to the battle-ship.

After the exchange informal greetings Mayor Warwick proposed to health of Secretary Long, and called upon m to respond. He did so briefly, thanking the ayor for his words of welcome, and Commore Paillp and Captain Sigsbee for their surtesy to him as their guest. If ever the Navy was worthy of the Nation it represents, it is worthy of it to-day. I appreciate the honor you have conferred on me in connecting my name with that of the commodore. I appreciate the honor of standing on the historic deck of the Texas in the presence of the man whose glorious work at Santiago has written the name of the American flag high on the records of the honor of nations. I respond as heartily as our country does to these, our heroes, and to you of Philadelphia for honoring them as you do."

Mayor Warwick then spoke a few words in praise of the Texas, and proposed a toast to commodore Philip, paying tribute not only to his heroism, but to his humanity in checking the theers of his crew while the defeated Spaniards were perishing.

This ended the Texas reception, and Secretary Long, with his party, returned to the May, the outle-ship repeating the salute as they left her. It was then 5.45 o'clock, and the May was prompity steamed over to her wharf to give the Secretary time to catch the 6d5 o'clock train for Boston.

Commodore Philip to-day received the following telegram: "Can you find a place for me in the parade Thursday as a Confederate veteran and a survivor of the old Merrimac." It was signed by R. C. A SPLENDID MEETING IN BETHEL CHURCH -TELLING SPEECH OF DR. HENDERSON.

A most enthusiastic mass-meeting of Republican colored voters was held last evening at the Bethel Methodist Episcopal Church, in West Twenty-fifthst., near Kighth-ave. The Rev. Granville Hunt called the meeting to order, and when he faced his audience there was not an empty seat or a foot of standing-room lett in the church. The Rev. Dr. Ernest Lyons acted as permanent chairman, and the Rev. J. M. Henderson. Mr. Henderson's address aroused the greatest enthusiasm among his hearers, who numbered nearly fifteen hundred. The speaker declared that all citizens who desired government administered with strict and impartial

It was a time, he said, when partisans could afford to place other things above party. Tammany and Democracy, he declared, were allied with the enemies of the colored race in the South, and anything that helped the Northern Democrats helped the Southern Democrats. Colonel Roosevelt, he declared, would give a colored man a man's chance, and more he did not want. Colonel Roosevelt would regard the colored man impartially, and give him what he deserved, no less and no more. Vast good would result to the race of colored people from the election of Colonel Roosevelt, and it was consequently the duty of every colored voter to support him. Mr. Henderson's speech was frequently interrupted with loud and prolonged applause, in which every man, woman and child in the big audience joined.

Bishop Derrick entered the church before the close of the meeting, and spoke briefly in favor of Colonel Roosevelt's candidacy.

rest of the time was devoted to the formation of a general committee of one hundred, the election of officers and the appointment of various other committees. The proceedings being of such a purely business character, there was little display of noisy enthusiasm, but what means a good deal more, each person present showed that he meant business, and would do his best to help the election of the Renablican ticks.

In his opening remarks Mr. Von Briesen, to whom the credit of the inception of the organization is due explained the purpose of the gathering. He said that the league was formed in order to bring Germans together to fight for hones administration, sourd money and the purity of the judiciary. Speaking of Colonel Rooseveit, Mr. Von Briesen said that his election should be favored by every one who had the good of the State and Nation at heart. Colonel Rooseveit had been a good and loyal public servant. He had shown his bravery while a public officer as well as on the buttlefield, and it was certain that he would never be subscribent to any hoss.

The temporary Committee on Organization, appointed at the meeting on Saturday, recommended one hundred names for the General Committee, which were agreed to unanimously.

The following officers were appointed: Arthur yon Briesen, president Max J. Lissauer, first vice-president. Hubert Gillis, second vice-president; Gustay H. Schwab, third vice-president; Gustay H. Schwab, third vice-president; Gustay H. Schwab, third vice-president committees.

Finance and Speakers committees were appointed, with a sub-committee, which will arrange for the mass-meeting, which is to be held at an early date. This sub-committee will probably meet to-day, and the announcement of the mass-meeting will be made at the earliest possible time. It has not yet been decided where the meeting will be held.

THE NORTH CAROLINA SITUATION.

OVERNOR RUSSELL ISSUES A PROCLAMATION FOR LAW AND ORDER.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 25.-Governor Daniel L. Rus sell to-day issued a proclamation dealing with the situation in this State. He declares in his procla-mation "that the political canvass now going forward has been made the occasion and pretext for bringing about conditions of lawlessness in certain counties in this State, such, for example, as Rich mend and Robeson counties." The proclamation also cites "that certain countles lying along the southern border of this State have been actually invaded by certain armed and lawless men from invaded by certain armed and lawless men from another State." and that political meetings have been broken up, and threats and intimidation used to prevent registration of votes, and that clitzens have been fred on from ambush, and others whipped.

The proclamation concludes by enicining all good citizens to observe the law, all civil officers to enforce the law, and ordering lawless men from other States to leave the State on pain of arrest and punishment.

Union last night. The Mavericks are officially known as the Citizens State Party, but Robert A. Widenmann, the chairman of last night's mass meeting, dubbed them The Mavericks. The mass was not so dense as it might have been. When Paul Fuller arose to call the meeting to order, the same being a thing of no great difficulty. there were upon the platform a number of the men into whose control the Citizens Union seems to have passed. Among them were Calvin Tomkins. Oswaid Villard, Wallace Macfarlane, John Jay Chapman, M. D. Rothschild, R. Fulton Cutting and Charles Frederick Adams.

Mr. Fuller's address was confined for the most part to the abuse of Colonel Roosevelt, who, he aid, seemed to be the victim of temporary aberra tion when in the presence of crowds of people. Mr. Fuller wound up by introducing Robert A. Widenmann as chairman. Mr. Widenmann was rough on Mr. Platt. He said that both parties mercilessly bartered and sold the rights of the voters. His eech was ornate with such phrases as "enslave free-born men," "political henchmen and favor-"parasites, heelers and blackless." In speak ing of the Republican party Mr. Widenmann re-marked survely that "in one fell swoop of the machine independence has been crushed out of our doughty Ker-io-nel until he is an humble follower of its reeking car of Juggernaut." If to object to this programme was to be a traitor and a renegade. he gloried in the names. Then he gave the State Citizens Party their new name of "healthy, energetic band of mavericks," and introduced Theodore Bacon, who was warmly welcomed by the audience.

MR. BACON'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Bacon spoke at length, and at first to close attention, but toward the end of his long speech there were signs of restlessness that at last took be a speaker at the meeting, and other speakers | the form of applicate that was meant only to en-

In almost his first words Mr. Encon was frank enough to confess that he was in a hopeless figh.
Referring to the fact that a meeting which he had addressed in Cooper Union five years ago had helped to defeat Judge Maymard, he remarked:

But if I were to pretend that I expected such a consequence to result from my address here, it would be an unterly insince pretence, although perhaps it might be justified for a political speech, which is not one that is looked upon ordinarily as exacting the highest principles of ethics and veracity. But I do not intend to say anything of the kind. I have only to say this in that regard, that

Then for a period of about twenty minutes Mr. Bacon went on to explain the reasons that led him to sacrifice himself to a hopeless cause. In substance, he reasoned that he was merely a candidate to give an opportunity to record their vote to those people who were opposed to voting for the Democratic or Republican bosses. Between Croker and Platt, he argued, there was no difference, both were engaged in a game of hattledore and shuttle-cock, with the State as their shuttlecock, to be passed from one to another of them and back again until by the intervention of the Independents the shuttlerook should fail to the ground between the bosses.

Turning his attention to the candidates of the regular parties. Mr. Bacon dismissed Judge Van Wyck with the mere description that he was the tool of OH Gobbo To Colonel Roosevelt he devoted more | Launcelot | Norisea Pierre Puvis de Chavannes, the celebrated French painter, was born at Lyons on December 14, 1825. His father was a prominent engineer, and belonged to a noble Burgundian family. Ill-health pre-vented his following his father's desire that he should accept his own profession. After the death of his parents, early in the twenties, the young man turned to art and made it the controlling interest of his life.

Henry Scheffer, brother of the celebrated Ary Scheffer, was of some assistance to him at this time. In 1848 he travelled in Italy, and came back to Paris eager for a master in tune with the tradi-tions of that country. At first he went to Eugene Delacroix, but remained with him only a fortnight. Soon after he went to study with Thomas Couture, and remained three months. He then decided to give up all masters and develop his talent in his

In 1850 he exhibited his first Salon picture. His initial success at the Salon was followed by aninitial success at the Saion, was initial success at the Saion was initial success at the Saion was initial to the place in the same apartment and studio in the Place Pigalle which he occupied until his death. But most of his work was done in a vast hull-like atelier at Neully, which was constructed with reference to the painting of his enormous canvases. His popular success dated from 1861, when he painted "Pence" and "War," two decorative panels. They attracted attention at the Exposition of 1867, and received a second-class medal. The State offered him 6,00 francs for "Peace." In accepting the offer the artist presented the companion picture to the nation. Some of his other more notable works are "Ave Picardia Nutrix" (1865). "Pro Patria Ludus," for which he received in 1882 the medal of honor at the Saion, and "Marseille" for the Marseilies Museum.

The fame of Puvis de Chavannes was greatly enhanced in this country by the purchase for the Hoston Public Library, in 1865, of nine of his panels, the most important of which is the staircase panel, representing "The Muses Acclaiming Genius the Messenger of Light."
